

Wild Prairie Rose

- The wild rose shrub has very prickly stems with reddish brown bark.
- the aboriginal people in North America used various parts of the wild rose as medicine
- became the state flower of North Dakota in 1907.