

The teeth of the Diplodocus were located at the front of the mouth and acted like a rake to strip foliage. Its nostrils were positioned high up on its head between the eyes instead of on the muzzle.

These eleven-ton creatures stood sixteen-feet high at the hips and were ninety-feet long. They once roamed parts of North America.

CCSS

RI.3.7 Use information gained from illustrations and the words in a text to demonstrate understanding of the text. Also SL.3.2, L.3.4.d; RI.4.7, SL.4.2, L.4.4.c; SL.5.2, L.5.4.c.