

The venomous lionfish uses the spiny stingers all over its body to protect itself from predators. If it is threatened, the lionfish turns itself upside-down, and faces its attacker with its spines spread out.