

People can be united as tightly as the individual kernels of corn that grow together on the cob.