

The dwarfs would not take money. They gave her to the Prince, for he promised to love and protect her always. And he put the case on the shoulders of his attendants and set out for his castle.