

Sixth-century Noble Couple

Left: The nobleman is dressed in a short mantle worn over a tunic with a decorative apron. His tight-fitting trousers are made of brocade and are, like his tunic and mantle, heavily trimmed with embroidery. His Phrygian cap is made of brightly colored felt. Right: The noblewoman wears an embroidered dalmatic over a long camisa. Her flowing silk palla is the same color as her camisa.