

A man of great physical vigor, hunting trips in Africa were enjoyed by President Theodore Roosevelt at various times during his career. During World War I he directed his energies in supporting the war effort at home.