

A wagon train on the prairie. A mounted bugler summons the members of a wagon train to ready themselves for another day on the trail. Often wagon trains were formed by chance combinations of groups. Here a party of farmers and their families bound for Oregon has joined forces with a group of miners bound for the gold fields of California.

