

Unfortunately, most of the regiment's horses were not shipped out in time, and in the campaign that followed the Rough Riders had to serve as foot soldiers. But Roosevelt led his command through sweltering jungles, and planned the capture of the enemy-held town of Las Guasimas.