

Come meet butterflies face to face at the Botanical Garden of the Ozarks, a haven to swallow-tails, monarchs, and many other butterflies! Butterfly host plants like the ones pictured here are planted throughout the garden. On a sunny day, you can see butterflies, moths, and dragonflies in each of the nine theme gardens. You can even stand between the wings of a giant butterfly in the Sensory Garden. Bring your family and a friend and visit the Garden soon!

BGO Butterfly Festival
September 2 through October 31, 2008

Plan to visit the Garden during peak butterfly season! Guided butterfly walks by appointment and each Sunday at 1pm starting September 14. Observe caterpillars, chrysalises, and newly emerged butterflies in a special display case. The best time to observe butterflies is the early afternoon, but there is butterfly activity throughout the Garden on sunny days. Butterfly festival activities are free with paid Garden admission.
