

Emperor Penguin (Aptenodytes forsteri). Among birds, the emperor penguin is definitely unique. It is the only species to breed exclusively along the edge of the Antarctic

Continent, and the only one that lays eggs in the seemingly forbidding circumstance of an Antarctic winter.